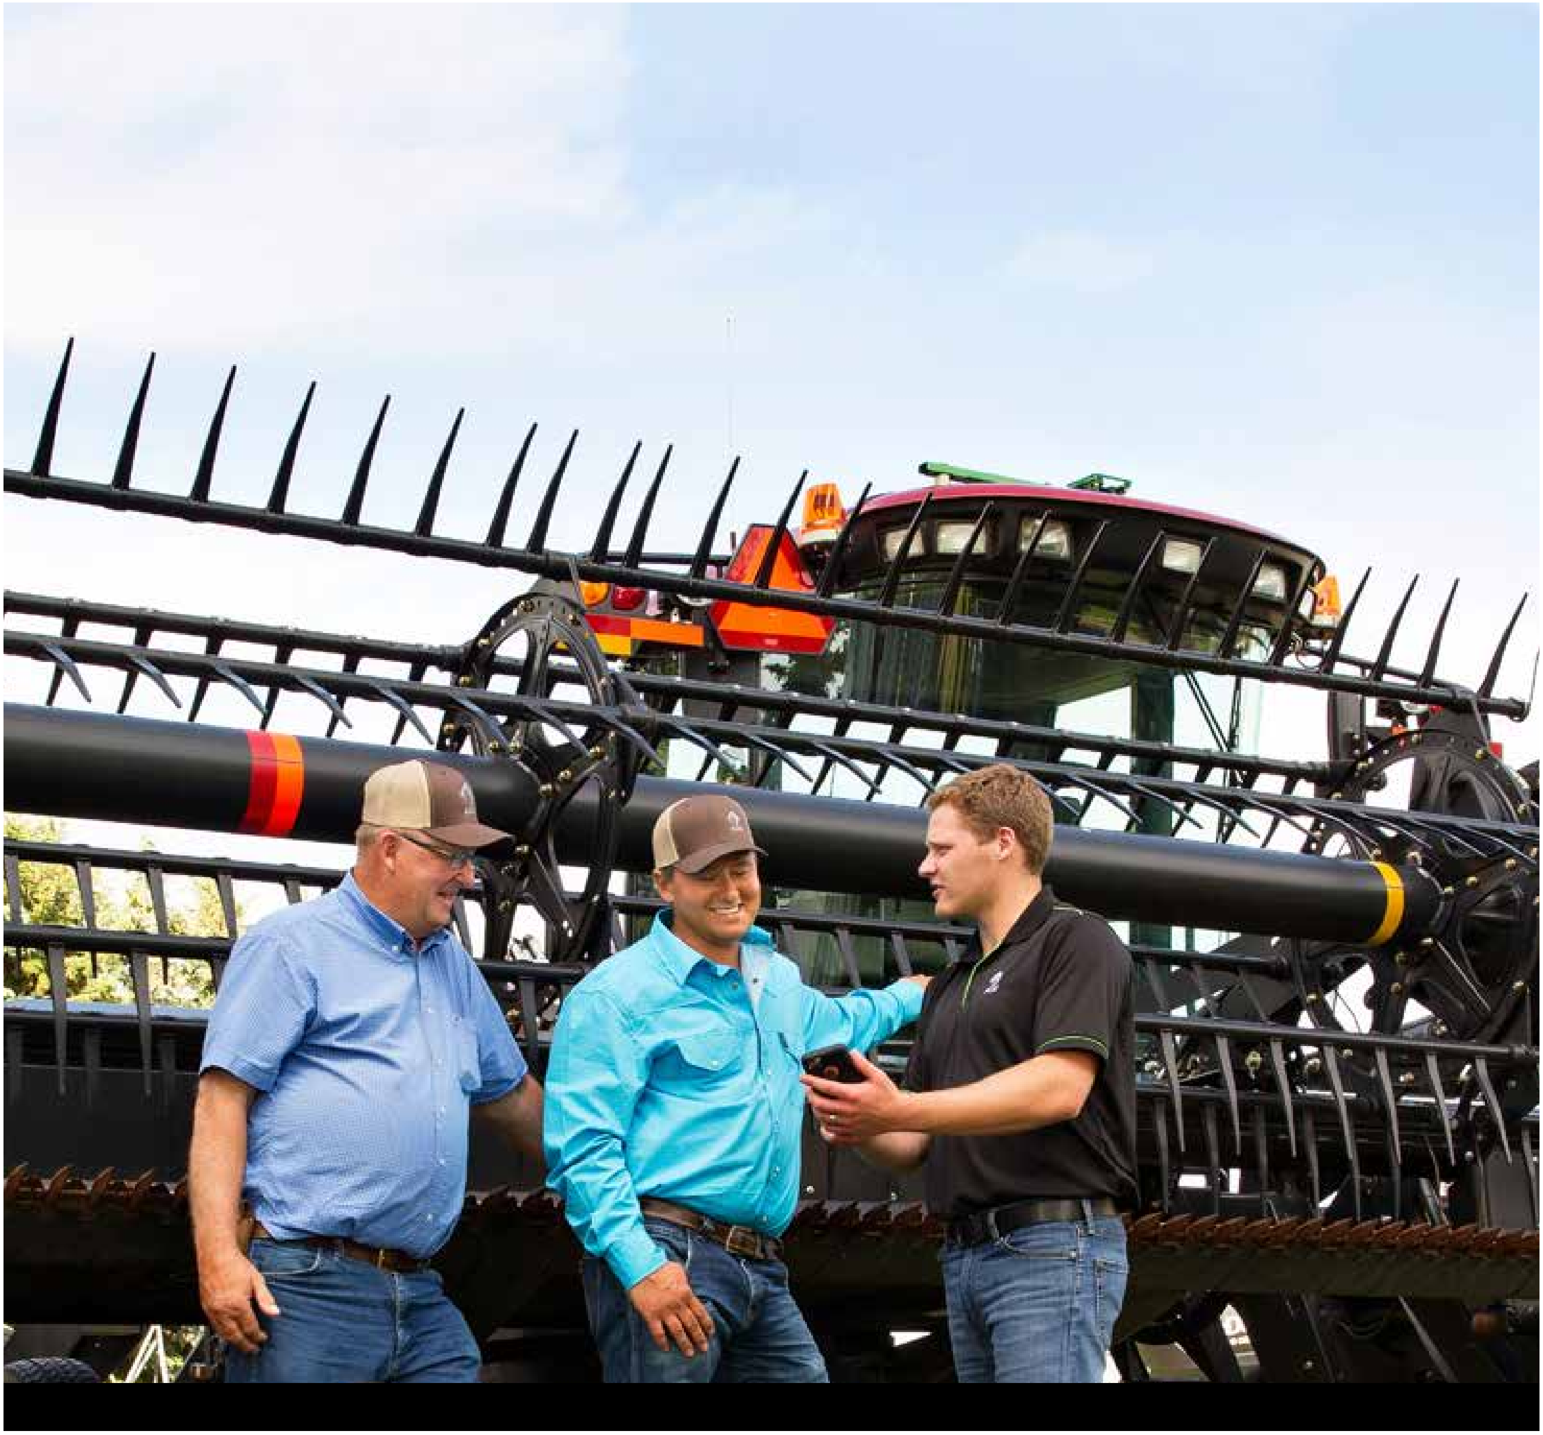
Canola Hedge-to-Arrive (HTA) Contract



Lock in a favorable futures reference level for a specific delivery period.

Background

The Hedge-to-Arrive (HTA) Contract offers you the choice to lock in only the futures reference price portion of your cash contract for a specific delivery time and quantity. The basis can be set at a later date, but must be done prior to delivery. It's one of many contract options that allow you to actively manage price risk.

Here's How It Works

1) Working with your ADM merchandiser, you lock in a futures price reference for a specific delivery period.
2) You set your basis for the designated delivery period at a level you are satisfied with prior to delivery.
3) You deliver your contracted canola and receive the cash price, which is your Futures Reference Price + /– Basis – Service Fee.

The Benefits

- It helps you actively manage your final canola price.
- It helps diversify your marketing.

Entering into this contract does not result in the seller opening a futures or options account or having a futures or options position. Any futures or options position taken by the buyer is for the benefit of the buyer only and shall be in the buyer's name. Futures and/or options may be employed as a canola pricing mechanism. This contract is not a futures or options contract or a commodity pool agreement.
